

Concluding Statement

It is clear that, with the nature of the businesses evolving on the land, there is a real need for facilities to support these operations. With the running of a smallholding and rearing of livestock there is a requirement for temporary accommodation for seasonal workers.

Through the camping season it will be essential to have accommodation for the management of Go Lightly Yurts. There is a necessity to protect and store equipment, tools, livestock fodder and hay.

In the current economic climate it is beneficial to be generating rural economic diversity and interesting employment. Pen-y-Bwr Farm and Go Lightly Yurts will be exemplifying and educating environmentally friendly, low-impact practice, and providing space for businesses to showcase their services. They will also be increasing and improving public access with the evolution of camping facilities and a nature trail.
