This application should be refused on the grounds that allowing wild boar on a site that is not suitable is foolhardy given the danger they pose and then further compounding the danger to allow firearms on site.

This woodland is very small and cannot be compared to the Forest of Dean where even with it's size many problems have occurred with wild boar. The applicant has changed his tune from the camping application when the traffic issue and access was not a problem, suddenly it is such a problem that an armed worker has to have accommodation on site, to look after wild boar that are extremely dangerous by his own admission.

The application should be rejected and wild boar sited in a more suitable woodland large enough to cope with them. This proposal is another inappropriate one as have the previous ones been for this site.
