Comment:

Many local residents are hugely concerned about the poor traffic access to this proposed development. The New Mills roundabout alternative is apparently ruled out as too costly so most traffic, it seems, will now be routed through the narrow bridge portal under the railway at the Hereford Road/Homend junction, an already busy and frequently congested place. Much traffic converges at this spot. Heavy trucks use it all the time to service the industrial estate and, in recent times, railway station overspill fills the nearby streets as far as Knapp Lane. I defy the most optimistic of planners to brush aside these concerns as mere technicalities. This sole major access is not adequate or safe especially when the car use generated by 625 new homes is added to the mix.
